Welcome Aboard

Annapolis is home to the United States Naval Academy and Naval Support Activity Annapolis. Both share many facilities and personnel. Their maps are included in this publication.

The location is outstanding. The Chesapeake Bay and Severn River surround Annapolis. Baltimore and Washington, D.C., are only 30 miles away. The quiet countryside of Maryland's Eastern Shore across the Bay Bridge provides newcomers much to explore and enjoy. The average monthly temperatures in the area range from the 30's in January and February to the high 90's in July and August. Summer days fade into crisp autumn weather, and sailing and outdoor activities continue into November.

Even though it is designated a city, Annapolis still retains a small-town atmosphere. Shopkeepers know their customers by name and people stroll leisurely down Main Street. Spring and summer bring tourists and families to the Academy. In autumn, Navy football games provide ample opportunities for enjoying the city and its surroundings.

As Maryland's capital for more than 300 years, Annapolis welcomes legislators from all over the state each year from January through April. The State House, one of the oldest existing houses of government in the country, still serves the Maryland legislature and, at one point, served as the United States Capitol where and when General George Washington voluntarily resigned his military commission to the Confederation Congress.

Tour around the Yard

As you stroll the scenic grounds of the Naval Academy, known as the Yard, the contrasts in architecture reflect its distinguished history. Designated a National Historic Site, the Yard offers tree-shaded monuments to commemorate courageous graduates and non-graduates, and their contributions to naval history.

Secretary of the Navy George Bancroft established the first Naval School at Fort Severn in Annapolis in 1845, and about 50 students attended classes taught by four officers and three civilian professors. In 1850, the Naval School became the United States Naval Academy, the undergraduate college of the U.S. Navy.

The current curriculum of four consecutive years at Annapolis with at-sea training during the summers was adopted in 1850. During the Civil War, the Academy moved to Newport, R.I. It was reestablished at Annapolis in 1865.

By World War I, there were nearly 200 graduates each year, and in 1933, an act of Congress authorized the Academy to confer the Bachelor of Science degree. As the Navy grew over the years, the Academy expanded from ten acres to a 338-acre complex and from 50 midshipmen to a student body of more than 4,400 midshipmen today.

Throughout years of growth and change, the basic mission of the Academy has remained:

"To develop midshipmen morally, mentally, and physically and to imbue them with the highest ideals of duty, honor, and loyalty in order to graduate leaders who are dedicated to a career of naval service and have potential for future development in mind and character to assume the highest responsibilities of command, citizenship, and government."

Bancroft Hall

Bancroft Hall, named after Secretary of the Navy George Bancroft, who founded the school in 1845, is home for the entire brigade of more than 4,400 midshipmen. It contains approximately 1,700 midshipman rooms, nearly five miles of corridors, and about 33 acres of floor space. All of the basic facilities midshipmen need for daily living and many facilities for recreation are found here. Although the living areas of Bancroft Hall are off-limits to visitors, several other areas are open. These include the Rotunda and Memorial Hall, dedicated to alumni who gave their lives in defense of their country. There is also a sample midshipman room near the Main Office to the right of the Rotunda.

Naval Academy Chapel

Construction of the Naval Academy Chapel started in 1904, and it was dedicated in 1908. The interdenominational chapel provides a serene place for the Brigade of Midshipmen to worship.

An addition, dedicated in 1940, increased the seating capacity to 2,500 and changed the basic design from a Greek to a Roman cross. Two massive bronze doors designed by Evelyn B. Longman grace the entrance. The two anchors that flank the chapel steps were reportedly made for one of the Navy's first armored cruisers, USS New York (ACR-2). Inside, the stained glass windows are majestic. The window above the altar, Christ Walking Upon the Water, was designed by Tiffany Studios. The Sir Galahad window symbolizes the ideals of the Navy.

The words of the Navy Hymn, "Eternal Father Strong to Save," dominate the altar. As part of a long-standing tradition, the congregation sings the Navy Hymn at the conclusion of every service. A single pew, cordoned off in blue velvet with a single burning candle, is reserved in honor of all prisoners of war and those missing in action. Below the nave of the main chapel, two smaller chapels, St. Andrew's Chapel and the Blessed Sacrament Chapel, are worship spaces for Protestant and Roman Catholic communities available for daily services.

Throughout the year, weddings are frequently celebrated in our beautiful chapel setting. Approximately 100 weddings are held every year.

John Paul Jones, a naval hero from the Revolutionary War, is entombed beneath the chapel. His remains were brought to America in 1905 after 113 years of obscurity in a Paris cemetery. Army Brig. Gen. Horace Porter, U.S. Ambassador to France (1897-1905), was responsible for locating the remains.

The Commodore Uriah P. Levy Center and Jewish Chapel

Jewish services are conducted in the Commodore Uriah P. Levy Center and Miller Chapel, completed in 2005, which is attached to Mitscher Hall and between the 7th and 8th wings of Bancroft Hall.

The Commodore Uriah P. Levy Center and Miller Chapel supports the moral development of midshipmen. It also is used to teach future officers about their roles as leaders in providing support for the needs of their Sailors and Marines. Located near Bancroft Hall, the 35,000-square-foot structure features a 410-seat chapel, the Academic Learning Center, a fellowship hall, a meeting room for the brigade's Honor Board, and places of study and reflection for midshipmen of all faiths.

History is Everywhere

Great moments and heroes in American Navy and Marine Corps history are represented throughout the Yard in statues, paintings, ships, plaques and buildings.

Dahlgren Hall, formerly the armory, is named for Rear Adm. John A. Dahlgren, inventor of naval guns and Civil War leader. It is the site of special events throughout the year. A full-sized exact replica of the Wright brothers' 1911 Navy B-1 airplane is suspended above the Class of 1953 ceremonial area.

Larson Hall, named for former two-time Naval Academy Superintendent Adm. Charles R. Larson (Class of 1958), houses the Office of the Superintendent and the Academy's administrative offices.

Ricketts Hall houses the Naval Academy Athletic Association, as well as ticket offices for Navy athletic events. Originally the headquarters for Naval Station Annapolis, and quarters for Sailors and mess stewards, Ricketts Hall was named for Adm. Claude V. Ricketts who rose from enlisted ranks to admiral in the U.S. Navy.

The southeast end of the Halsey Field House houses the Admissions offices while the rest of the 80,000-square-foot building is used for sports and physical training. Squash courts, weight rooms, basketball courts, climbing wall and an astroturf field are under one roof. Halsey Field House is named for Fleet Adm. William F. Halsey (Class of 1904) a major figure of the South Pacific naval and joint amphibious campaigns in World War II.

On the seaward end of Halsey Field House is the Armel-Leftwich Visitor Center and USNA Gift Shop. This facility houses exhibits, a guide service that provides both walking and driving tours, a 4,500-square-foot gift shop, vending machines and a 100-seat theater where visitors can view a 13-minute film on the life of a midshipman. Armel-Leftwich Visitor Center is named for Navy Capt. Lyle O. Armel and Marine Corps Lt. Col. William G. Leftwich, both Class of 1953, who served in the Vietnam War and where Leftwich was killed in action.

The Lejeune Physical Education Center houses an Olympic-size pool, practice wrestling ring and weight rooms. The Academy's reputation for outstanding teams and athletes since the early 1900s is exhibited in the Athletic Hall of Fame on the second floor. Lejeune Hall is named for Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune (Class of 1888), the first Marine to command an Army division in World War I and the 13th Commandant of the U.S. Marine Corps.

The sarcophagus of Commodore John Paul Jones (1747-92) was sculpted by Sylvain Salieres (1865-c.1918) who had come to America by 1903 to work for the architectural firm of Warren and Wetmore on New York's Grand Central Station. The black and white marble of the casket is supported by bronze dolphins and decorated on top by bronze seaweed. Surrounding it and embedded in the floor in gold are the names of the ships that Jones commanded during the American Revolution. At the head of the sarcophagus are his name, dates, and an inscription reading, "He gave our Navy its earliest traditions of heroism and victory."

Hopper Hall is the first new academic building on the Yard since 1975. The building is named for Rear Adm. Grace Hopper, an accomplished mathematician who joined the U.S. Navy Reserve during World War II. In her legacy, the building is home to midshipmen in the Cyber Operations; Computer Science; Electrical Engineering; Information Technology; Robotics and Control Engineering; Naval Architecture and Ocean Engineering; and Physics majors. This is the first building at any of one of the three military service academies (USNA, USAFA, USMA) to be named for a woman.

T-Court

T-Court, where noon time formations of the Brigade of Midshipmen have been held since 1905, takes its name from the prominently placed figurehead of Chief Tamanend, a Native American Chief of the Delaware Indians in the 1600s. The original figurehead of the old ship of the line "USS Delaware" was carved in wood and is now housed indoors in the Visitor Center. It was replaced by a bronze replica in 1930.

Nimitz Library, named for Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz (Class of 1905) who was commander-in-chief of allied naval forces in the Pacific during World War II and served as the chief of naval operations, 1945-47. The offices of the academic dean and provost are here, as well as a collection of more than 600,000 volumes of books and bound periodicals, plus government documents, microforms, multimedia and extensive holdings in Special Collections and Archives. In addition, Nimitz provides access to a growing array of electronic resources, including more than 20,000 serial titles online.

Sampson, Mahan, and Carter Halls are the inter-connected academic buildings designed by architect Ernest Flagg and constructed in 1907. The complex is home to the Naval Academy's School of Humanities and Social Sciences. Sampson Hall, named for 13th Superintendent Rear Adm. William T. Sampson, is where English and history courses are taught. Mahan Hall, named for naval historian Rear Adm. Alfred Thayer Mahan, housed the library until 1973. The main level has an auditorium that is used for a wide variety of campus events, including performances by midshipman activity groups such as the Masqueraders. Carter Hall is named for 1947 USNA graduate, 39th President of the United States, and Nobel Peace Prize laureate Jimmy Carter. Carter Hall houses the Political Science and Languages & Cultures Departments.

The Naval Academy Museum, located in Preble Hall, named for Commodore Edward Preble, naval leader during the Revolution and the Barbary War with Tripoli, contains a collection of more than 50,000 items such as ship models, paintings, prints and artifacts depicting American naval history and the history of the Naval Academy.

Chauvenet Hall

Chauvenet and Michelson Halls house the School of Mathematics and Science, as well as the Department of Economics from the School of Humanities and Social Sciences. Chauvenet Hall is named after Professor William Chauvenet, one of the original seven faculty members when the Academy was founded in 1845. Michelson Hall honors Albert Michelson (Class of 1873) and the first American scientist to receive the Nobel Prize in Physics.

Rickover Hall houses the School of Engineering and Weapons and recognizes Adm. Hyman Rickover (Class of 1922) the father of the nuclear Navy.

Farragut House (The Superintendent's Quarters), designed by architect Ernest Flagg, has been home to Naval Academy superintendents since 1909. With a total of 34 rooms and more than 16,000 square feet of living space, superintendents have entertained presidents, kings, queens, prime ministers, admirals and distinguished guests from many nations, along with thousands of guests each year. The residence and garden are not open to the public.

Alumni Hall, appropriately named because the U.S. Naval Academy Alumni Association raised more than half the funds needed to construct it, seats up to 5,710 for concerts, athletic events, lectures and plays.

U.S. Naval Academy

The Mission

Founded as the Naval School in 1845, the United States Naval Academy today is a four-year service Academy whose mission is: "To develop midshipmen morally, mentally and physically and to imbue them with the highest ideals of duty, honor and loyalty in order to graduate leaders who are dedicated to a career of naval service and have potential for future development in mind and character to assume the highest responsibilities of command, citizenship and government."

Campus

The Yard, as the campus is called, features tree-lined brick walks, French Renaissance and contemporary architecture and scenic vistas of the Chesapeake Bay. The Bancroft Hall dormitory complex, the Naval Academy Chapel, and other century-old buildings make the academy a National Historic Site. Newer facilities such as Hopper Hall, the Naval Academy Center for Cyber Security Studies, give the academy state-of-the-art educational resources.

Location

The Academy is set on 338 acres between the south bank of the Severn River and historic downtown Annapolis, the state capital of Maryland. Annapolis is 33 miles east of Washington, D.C., and 30 miles southeast of Baltimore.

Students

More than 4,400 men and women, known as "midshipmen," represent every U.S. state and territory as well as several foreign countries.

Faculty

The approximately 600-member Naval Academy faculty is an integrated group of military and civilian instructors. The student-faculty ratio is 8:1, with most class sizes ranging from 10 to 22 students.

Professional Development

Midshipmen study subjects such as cyber security, seamanship and navigation tactics, naval engineering, naval weapons, leadership, ethics and military law, small arms and drill during the four-year program. In addition, during part of the summers, midshipmen train at naval bases and on ships in the fleet.

Extracurriculars

Exciting extracurricular activities are offered in areas ranging from engineering societies to military professional clubs and associations.

Academics

In addition to a core curriculum of academic and professional courses, majors are offered in 26 subject areas including engineering; science, mathematics and computer science; and humanities and social sciences.

Athletics

Midshipmen can choose from a total of 36 intercollegiate varsity sports: 18 for men, 12 for women and three co-ed. Students can also choose from 16 intramural and 17 club sports.

Graduation

Bachelor of science degrees specifying a major field are awarded to midshipmen upon graduation. They receive commissions as ensigns in the U.S. Navy or second lieutenants in the U.S. Marine Corps and serve as officers for at least five years of service.

Organization

The Superintendent of the Naval Academy, a 3-star Navy admiral, is responsible for the direction and administration of the Academy. The superintendent has several principal assistants who are responsible for various programs and operations at the Academy. These assistants include:

The Commandant of Midshipmen functions as the dean of students, and is responsible for the military, professional and leadership development of the more than 4,400-member Brigade of Midshipmen.

The Academic Dean and Provost is responsible to the superintendent for all matters relating to the academic program and faculty, and manages the academic program in five divisions (similar to civilian colleges elsewhere): engineering and weapons, humanities and social sciences, mathematics and science, professional development, and leadership education and development. The Naval Academy faculty is an integrated group of more than 570 military officers and civilians.

The Director of Athletics heads the Naval Academy Athletic Association, which sponsors and manages 35 varsity intercollegiate sports for midshipmen.

The Dean of Admissions is the principal assistant to the superintendent in all matters relating to the recruiting, guidance, and selection of candidates for admission to the Naval Academy, the Naval Academy Preparatory School and the Foundation Prep Program, and for the preparation and maintenance of the official candidate records.

The Chief Financial Officer is the principal advisor to the superintendent in matters relating to financial resources, human resources and the operation of a network of campus support activities, including the Midshipmen Store, visitor center, food service outlets and restaurants, recreation facilities and personal service activities. This network is known as the Naval Academy Business Services Division.

The Deputy for Information Technology and CIO is the principal advisor to the superintendent in all matters relating to information technology, enterprise infrastructure and knowledge management.

The Command Master Chief is the principal advisor to the superintendent in all matters serving midshipmen, Sailors, Marines, and their families.

Base Support

Naval Support Activity Annapolis provides common base support functions. NSA Annapolis reports directly to the Commandant, Naval District Washington in the Commander Naval Installations Command, and is responsible for providing effective and efficient shore installation management and support.

Midshipman Life

Plebe Summer

Induction Day: each summer, nearly 1,200 young men and women stand shoulder-to-shoulder, as they take the Oath of Office and become plebes (or freshmen) at the Naval Academy. The experience they will share over the next four years will challenge them morally, mentally and physically.

Plebe Summer is a demanding, fast-paced orientation that begins the four years of preparation for commissioning Navy or Marine Corps officers. Physical and mental demands upon the plebes' time seem never ending, but they all have a purpose: the development of leadership ability, motivation, moral strength, physical skills and stamina—attributes of any outstanding naval officer.

Bridging the gap between a plebe's civilian life or previous military service and life as a midshipman, Plebe Summer consists of seven weeks of intensive training. As the summer progresses, the new midshipmen rapidly assimilate basic skills and confidence in seamanship, military customs and tradition, and damage control.

Infantry drill, shooting pistols and rifles, and sailing all contribute to providing each plebe the fundamentals of midshipmen life. A rigorous physical conditioning program is also part of the daily regimen. Teamwork and a desire to excel are developed through competition in activities ranging from athletics to dress parades and small unit activities.

However difficult, Plebe Summer is a time midshipmen will never forget. They experience both success and failure. Successes are rewarded with commendations, and failures result in constructive criticism and guidance. Making each hurdle brings a feeling of relief that it is over and a sense of pride that the challenge has been met and conquered.

The rigorous routine and challenges of a year-long leadership development system are unique to the service academies. Complementing other phases of midshipmen training and education, the plebe year at the Naval Academy is designed to test and develop. It is a challenging year requiring midshipmen to stand on their own feet, to produce under pressure, to respond promptly and intelligently to orders, and finally, to measure up to the highest standards of honor, courage, and commitment.

Only by experiencing the exhausting rigors of Plebe Summer, by facing the responsibility of leading other midshipmen and by throwing a hat into the air at graduation can one experience what the Naval Academy is all about. The Naval Academy's program is tightly structured: a four-year program is required of all midshipmen.

At the Academy, all students are called midshipmen, which is a rank between chief warrant officer and ensign in the Navy. A midshipman first class is a senior, a second class is a junior, a third class is a sophomore, and a fourth class, or plebe, is a freshman. The student body is the Brigade of Midshipmen and is divided into six battalions. Five companies make up each battalion. The midshipman command structure is headed by midshipmen first class, chosen for outstanding leadership and professional performance. Overseeing all brigade activities is the Commandant of Midshipmen, an active-duty senior officer. Working for the commandant, experienced Navy and Marine Corps officers and senior enlisted are assigned oversight and mentoring roles in the midshipmen companies and battalions.

As a midshipman progresses through the Academy, leadership responsibility grows. With each succeeding year, midshipmen assume more important roles in running their company, battalion and the brigade.

First class midshipmen make daily decisions affecting the morale and performance of other midshipmen, teaching them fundamentals of the naval profession and helping them through difficulties. "Firsties" lead through personal example, communication, rewards and discipline and other techniques they have learned in the classroom and through three years' experience. Under the guidance of seasoned Navy and Marine Corps officers and senior enlisted, a midshipman builds leadership skills. By the time a midshipman graduates and becomes a naval officer, they have practiced leadership in a variety of situations and have learned the fundamentals of officership needed for the Navy and Marine Corps.

Moral

Mental

Physical

Moral Development

Navy and Marine Corps officers have to make morally correct decisions under the pressure of combat. Developing moral courage as a basis for these decisions develops leaders who will stand for what they believe and do the right thing for the right reason.

As future Navy and Marine Corps combat leaders, midshipmen are encouraged to set high personal standards of integrity and character, to respect both subordinates and superiors, and to measure their own actions with how well they mirror officers and leaders whom they respect.

Character development and ethics are incorporated throughout every aspect of the Academy's four-year program. Character building situations occur daily throughout the Yard, in classrooms, in Bancroft Hall, on watch or on liberty as well as on the athletic field. Midshipmen are reminded their integrity and honor can never be taken from them. They alone must choose to stand tall and do the right thing in the face of pressure and maintain their honor. Through the study of ethics, midshipmen are given tools for moral decision making.

Mental Development

Preparing our graduates to succeed as officers and leaders through a rigorous education is an essential part of the Academy's mission. The mental development of midshipmen takes place through a demanding academic and professional curriculum so that they can excel as officers in the fleet.

Midshipmen complete a challenging core curriculum across their four years at the Academy. The core requires professional coursework including navigation, ethics, leadership and naval law in addition to engineering, science, mathematics, humanities and social sciences. The goal is a broad-based education that qualifies graduates for any warfare specialty in the Navy or Marine Corps; a technical foundation that enables them to lead in the modern military; and majors programs that foster critical thinking within a focused academic discipline.

The workload is demanding and designed to shape leaders who can motivate teams in challenging circumstances; critical thinkers who can process information quickly; and officers who can apply fundamental principles from science, engineering, and mathematics to an increasingly complex, technical operating environment.

Midshipmen learn the basics of the naval service through four years of classroom instruction combined with the practical experiences of handling 108-foot diesel powered training craft; fleet cruises in junior officer roles; and professional programs such as Powered Flight giving aspiring aviators the chance to solo, and “Leatherneck” training with the Marines.

While at the Academy midshipmen receive a strong technical foundation. Successful officers need to understand how complex systems work to win on the 21st century battlefield and midshipmen learn how complex systems are interconnected, their strengths and limitations, and how best to leverage technology on the battlefield. Naval officers must also think critically. Midshipmen learn to discern fact from fiction, question basic assumptions, analyze vast amounts of information and assess dynamic situations with clear logic in order to make well-reasoned decisions in the most stressful situations.

The Naval Academy is but one rung in the ladder of lifelong learning. That learning will continue throughout their careers. The Academy is committed to providing our midshipmen with a rigorous academic program that will enable them to succeed in the fleet. Our goal is to provide the Navy and Marine Corps with graduates who have the basic professional competencies of a naval officer, the technical confidence to comprehend today’s complex systems, and the critical thinking skills that allow them to develop effective solutions to tough problems. This forms the basis for our curriculum—and leads to granting all graduates a Bachelor of Science degree.

International Studies

Program for Midshipmen

First and second class midshipmen are eligible to participate in USNA's Semester Study Abroad program. These programs support the seven languages taught at the Academy: Arabic, Chinese, French, German, Japanese, Russian and Spanish. They also support science, technology, engineering, and math (STEM) majors who can take content courses in English and enroll in local language courses. Midshipmen are able to study at foreign naval academies or civilian universities.

Community Relations: Midshipman Action Group

Established in 1992 as a community relations program for and by the Brigade of Midshipmen, the Midshipman Action Group collaborates with community partners to bring programs of notable positive impact to communities within the Baltimore - Washington corridor and beyond. MAG has developed a variety of programs, including tutoring, mentoring, environmental, rebuilding, and other outreach engagements in coordination with community partners from the Annapolis, Baltimore, and Washington D.C. areas, as well as regional and national partners. MAG also focuses on local food insecurity issues by donating tens of thousands of pounds of food, annually, to those most in need. MAG prepares midshipmen for future service by developing skills and knowledge that engage leadership, stewardship and teamwork commitments across our many diverse communities.

The Office of Community Relations coordinates the USNA Speakers Bureau, which is an all-volunteer bureau responding to community requests for guest speakers from USNA.

Physical Development

The Naval Academy program challenges midshipmen physically so that when they graduate they will be prepared to successfully lead in combat. We want future officers to be team builders and learn how to motivate others to excel. We want them to be resilient when facing adversity. We want them to compete on the athletic field—and ultimately fight on the battlefield—to win.

It is important that midshipmen learn about teamwork and how the team as a whole succeeds because collectively their efforts are greater than the sum of individual contributions. Individuals on teams learn to work as a unit to achieve a common goal; in combat, teamwork spells success or failure. A great place for our future officers to learn and understand the value of teamwork is on the athletic field. Through intramurals, club sports, or varsity athletics, we require each midshipman to fully participate, to play on a team and strive to win. The fundamentals of analyzing an opponent and then bringing their own team's strengths to bear against the other team's weaknesses are taught through competition on the athletic field. In order to win, midshipmen must set high goals for themselves and their team and find a way to meet them. Our intent is that by the time they enter the fleet as junior officers, midshipmen have learned not only what teamwork, determination, and leadership mean but how they transcend to succeeding in combat.

Developing midshipmen physically is about hard work, stamina, and physical and mental toughness. Leaders must learn to fight, and never accept defeat, on the playing field or the battlefield.

Commissioning

Week

Commissioning Week is what most midshipmen say they've been anticipating for four years. "Commissioning Week makes it all worthwhile," according to the "firsties," or seniors. Traditions and special events provide opportunities for families and midshipmen to share accomplishments and celebrate their commissioning as an officer in the Navy or Marine Corps. From spectacular aerial demonstrations by the Blue Angels to parades, dances and the graduation and commissioning ceremony, the entire Yard relishes the week-long celebration. As the newly-commissioned officers give a final cheer for those they leave behind, they toss their midshipman covers high into the air in a moment of celebration. After graduation, a few more traditions prevail: family members or special friends pin on the new Navy ensign's shoulder boards or the Marine Corps second lieutenant's gold bars, and the first person who salutes a new ensign or second lieutenant is presented a silver dollar by the graduate.

After Graduation

Upon graduation and commissioning, the career options available to Naval Academy graduates are the broadest offered by any of the nation's service academies. Graduates may specialize in surface warfare, with assignments aboard ships ranging from guided-missile destroyers to amphibious ships deployed in expeditionary strike groups; enter the submarine service, with duty aboard nuclear-powered attack and ballistic missile submarines; fly a variety of aircraft from helicopters and shore-based patrol planes to supersonic, aircraft carrier-based jet fighters; command infantry, armor, artillery, or aviation units as a Marine Corps officer; and lead the most talented and highly motivated Sailors and Marines in the world, no matter what career path they're assigned.

Supporting Organizations

The presence of the following “supporting organizations” does not constitute an endorsement thereof by the United States Naval Academy, Department of the Navy, or the Department of Defense.

Naval Academy Athletic Association

Ricketts Hall, Naval Academy
410-293-2700, www.navysports.com

The Naval Academy Athletic Association is a 501 (c) (3) nonprofit organization charged with providing resources to support the varsity and junior varsity programs offered by the Naval Academy. The NAAA operates with the guidance of their Board of Control, whose members report to the Superintendent of the U.S. Naval Academy. More than 90% of funding support for NAAA programs is through external sources of revenue (e.g. Blue & Gold memberships, ticket sales, corporate sponsorship, television revenue, parking, etc.). Less than 10% of the operating budget for varsity and junior varsity programs is provided by the Academy via government funding. Therefore, Blue & Gold memberships are critical to provide our teams with the supplemental dollars necessary to close the “resource gap” between the Naval Academy teams and our Division I competition. Private support is critical to NAAA’s success.

To join The Blue & Gold, or to request more information, contact:

The Blue-N*-Gold
566 Brownson Road, Annapolis, MD 21402

USNA Alumni Association and Foundation

Annapolis, MD 21402
410-295-4000, www.usna.com

"The U.S. Naval Academy Alumni Association and Foundation collaborate to support the Naval Academy and its mission. The Alumni Association focuses on engaging and connecting alumni through various support programs, events, and networking connections. The Foundation, on the other hand, primarily focuses on fundraising efforts to provide financial support for the Academy's programs, scholarships, and facilities. Together, they work hand in hand to strengthen the Naval Academy community, enhance the educational experience, and contribute to the development of future leaders in the Navy and Marine Corps."

- JEFF WEBB '95, PRESIDENT AND CEO, U.S. NAVAL ACADEMY AA&F

The U.S. Naval Academy Alumni Association and the U.S. Naval Academy Foundation are two independent, not-for-profit corporations sharing a single president and CEO and operating as a fully integrated organization in support of the U.S. Naval Academy and its mission.

The Naval Academy Alumni Association and the Naval Academy Foundation together serve as an enterprise. In that capacity, we connect and support our alumni and the U.S. Naval Academy community so the Brigade and alumni serve at their full potential for the good of the nation. The Enterprise's focus and core competencies are engagement and philanthropy in pursuit of complementary and closely aligned missions.

Established in 1886, the U.S. Naval Academy Alumni Association continues to adhere to its mission to serve and support the United States, the U.S. Naval Service, the U.S. Naval Academy, and its alumni. We strengthen our members' bonds to the Academy and to each other, to help them thrive as leaders in and out of uniform, and reach their full potential.

Guided by its Board of Trustees, the Alumni Association is also advanced by its network of more than 77 active classes, 102 chapters, 78 parent groups, and five shared interest groups.

The original U.S. Naval Academy Foundation, formed in 1944 and now known as the Foundation's Athletic and Scholarship Programs division (A&SP), set out to support athletic programs at the Naval Academy through scholarships to preparatory schools and awards. In 1999, the Foundation and the Naval Academy Endowment Trust merged to form the sole fundraising entity for the Naval Academy, now known as the U.S. Naval Academy Foundation and guided by its Board of Directors. The Foundation supports, promotes and advances the mission of the Naval Academy by working in conjunction with Academy leadership to identify strategic and institutional priorities and by raising, managing, and disbursing private gift funds that provide a margin of excellence in support of the nation's premier leadership institution.

Approximately 100 employees serve the 69,000 living USNA Alumni and AA&F membership from the new Fluegel Alumni Center: The facility - opened to the public in September 2023 - provides a premium venue for a wide range of alumni events, streamlines and enhances operations and provides an ideal space to celebrate alumni achievements in all aspects of society.

The course is open to midshipmen, active-duty personnel stationed in Annapolis, Academy faculty and staff, and their guests. It is also available to all active-duty and retired military personnel. The course is open during daylight hours, weather permitting. The golf pro shop is located in the Brigade Sports Complex. Advance reservations are recommended. A snack bar, the Club at Greenbury Point, is located on the premises and may be reached at 410-293-4679.
